Plastic pellet pollution is a growing environmental crisis as there is small pellet sized pieces of raw plastic are often spilled during transportation. They cause harm to marine eco-systems particularly when ingested by marine animals.

The Vikoma Enviro Skimmer is a weir skimmer working alongside a filtration system designed to recover floating plastic pellets. This is a versatile skimmer also suited to recovery of other floating pollution such as weed and grasses from shorelines, rivers, canals and ponds.

Plastics pollution such as split pellets is becoming an increasing global threat.

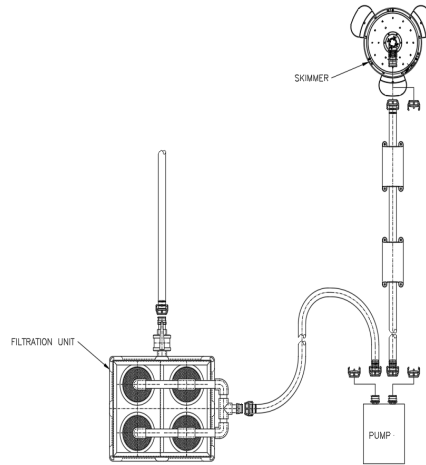

The Vikoma Enviro Skimmer is an easy way to remove floating plastic pellets. They are recovered by the skimmer's weir action and collected into an efficient filtration/collection system, draining the water for return to the sea or rivers. Collected pellets can be recycled.

The skimmer can operate in shallow or deep water. The compact design allows the system to operate in small as well as large areas and it is suited to any calm water.

The buoyancy floats are made from a strong and durable plastic. The system comprises a suction weir skimmer coupled to a diesel driven pump with hoses, coupling and floats and an in-line filtration system. Our high performance transfer pump is key to an effective system.
